The fundamentals

of

DOOH advertising

DOOH venue types

One of the best parts of DOOH is that it creates the perfect balance between captivating your audience without feeling invasive. They work because, when done right, they're ads that don't feel like ads.

It achieves this through a diverse range of screens, so that an ad can either adapt to the surroundings or grab attention, depending on its goal. The different screens are categorized into three venue types: Large format, place-based and point of purchase.

Large Format

Place-Based Media

Point of Purchase

Large format

Large format DOOH screens can come in various shapes and sizes, ranging from large LED billboards along highways to oversized screens in city centers, shopping malls, and transportation hubs.

These larger-than-life screens have the power to create memorable moments and leave a lasting impression on your audience.

LARGE FORMAT

Premium street level

Street-level screens are strategically placed in urban environments. These screens are designed to capture the attention of people passing by, engaging them with dynamic and targeted content.

Street level DOOH screens can take various forms, including digital billboards, interactive kiosks, digital posters and more.

LARGE FORMAT

Transit screens

Strategically placed transit screens cater to commuters and travelers, presenting marketers with a chance to deliver personalized messages to audiences on the move.

Place-based media

Place-based screens become a seamless part of your audience's day by placing your brand where they naturally go without it feeling distracting.

It acts as your brand's storyteller, crafting messages tailored to specific locations when and where it's relevant.

Place-based media includes locations in bars, gas stations, gyms, office buildings and more.

PLACE-BASED

Point of purchase

Influence shoppers at the moment buying decisions are made, at the point of purchase (POP).

Whether in the aisle or at the register, 70% of buying decisions are determined in-store. With every ad, your brand's narrative unfolds at this critical moment, tipping the scales in your favor.

Targeting strategies

Launching a successful campaign lies in knowing where your audience will be and when. This is possible by partnering with a DSP that uses location data to analyze consumer movement patterns and create audiences based on the places they visit.

You can use that location data to create the movement patterns of audiences based on a variety of data sources.

It's all in a day's journey

6 A.M. COFFEE SHOP

7:30 A.M. TRAIN STATION

5:30 P.M. GYM

7 P.M. BAR

9 P.M. TRAIN STATION

Consider the daily journey of public transit commuters - morning train rides, office hours, evening unwind at a bar.

DOOH allows you to understand these patterns and automates displaying your ads precisely where and when they'll make the biggest impact - and nowhere (or when) that it won't.

Precise planning, in action

Creative strategies

With DOOH, marketers can adapt their messaging in real-time, ensuring that the ad remains relevant in any context.

Whether adjusting to specific demographics or even time-sensitive promotions, the versatility of DOOH allows marketers to engage their audience with content that is tailored to maximize impact and relevance.

Dynamic OOH

Serve the most relevant ad content to viewers every time.

With dynamic creative, your ads can seamlessly adapt to the place and the moment, changing messages and images based on data like:

WEATHER

NEAREST STORE

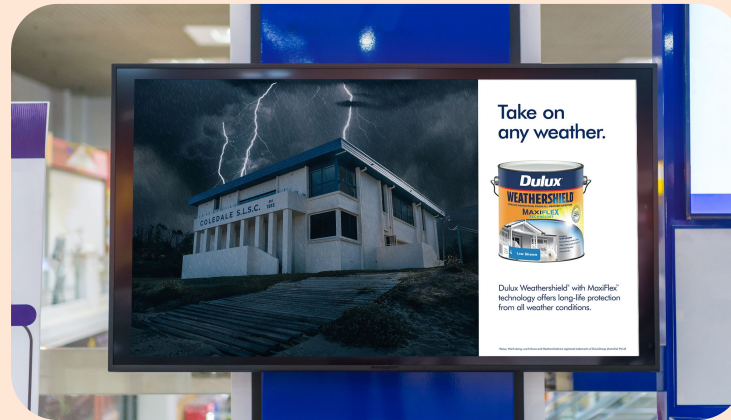

SPORTS SCORES

Weather targeting

The weather isn't just a small-talk topic; it's a silent influencer in our choices and attitudes as consumers.

With weather triggers, you can respond in real-time to weather conditions to impact your audience's behavior. Matching your ad creatives with the right weather helps your ads feel like a natural part of the surroundings.

Video in out-of-home

Movement can draw attention and increase engagement with a DOOH ad. Including video within DOOH creatives can drive greater impact.

However, to avoid viewers missing key information, advertisers should adapt the type of motion based on the average dwell time.

Measuring

a DOOH campaign

Measure results to plan your next move

Evaluating the true ROI of out-of-home media requires two things: pinpointing when and where your ad played and who witnessed it (exposure), and understanding how that exposure translates into real-world actions for your brand.

With a precise view of the real impact of your campaign, you can turn insights into action for informed marketing decisions.

From awareness to your bottom line

While OOH has historically been used as an awareness driver, today the world's leading brands are using it to drive a variety of marketing results across the entire funnel.

DOOH offers a suite of measurement solutions that makes it easier than ever to evaluate the impact of your campaign on consumer behavior by measuring and analyzing how audiences were exposed to your ads.

Opportunity to See Study (OTS)

The Opportunity to See (OTS) study, similar to a brand study, explores brand metrics such as awareness, consideration and consumer intent.

Unlike a brand study where the test group is based on verified campaign exposure and compared to a control group, in an OTS study, the test group consists of individuals present in the market where your media is running.

This methodology provides insight into the organic impact of your campaigns.
